NEW CRYSTAL JUST A BIT AHEAD OF PROCESSION

Handsome New Playhouse Brilliantly Lighted With Electricity Last Night for First Test of Wiring.

A flood of dazzling lights that turned night into day filled the Crystal theater on South Second street last night when the electricians threw on for the first time the switches that control the electric lighting of the handsome new playhouse which is now practically completed and which will be thrown open to the general public probably next Monday night. The myriad of bright lights set off to the fullest advantage the magnificence of the interior of the theater and gave for the first time an adequate idea of the architectural beauty of the exterior of the house.

Present when the first test of the wiring was made were Joseph L. La Driere who designed and planned the entire theater and who successfully supervised its construction in all details; Mike Nash and Arno Hanning of the Nash Electrical Supply company, which did all the intricate wiring; Joseph R. Scotti, who will be manager of the theater, and several others who took a prominent part in the construction and finishing of the building.

When the switches were snapped on for the first time, turning hundreds of amperes through the wiring, causing dazzling rays of light to penetrate through the darkness, exclamations of surprise and delight were spontaneously made. The electric lights, placed throughout the entire interior and exterior of the theater with a generous hand, revealed the fineness of the work of the architect, Mr. La Driere who was warmly congratulated by everybody present for the ideal arrangement of the house. For the information of those who have not yet seen the new playhouse, it may be said that it will seat one thousand people, and that the stage can be seen plainly and clearly from all parts of the parquet, dress circle, boxes and balcony, there being no posts or other obstructions, and the seats having been arranged by a mathematical system of elevation perfect in its execution. Admission to the theater will be ten and twenty cents and the attractions will consist of moving pictures thrown on a screen so as to show off ten by twelve feet; music by a crack orchestra and the best vaudeville that can be obtained.

"Just a little bit ahead of the procession," was the verdict of those who attended the formal "opening" of the new Crystal last night. The playhouse is not as fine in every particular as the best theaters of its kind in Denver, Los Angeles or any of the cities of 200,000 to 500,000 people.

Joseph Barnett the man who built the new Crystal and who owns the Pastime and the old Crystal, which latter playhouse by the way, will be closed some time this week, was not present at the opening last night being now in Los Angeles. Mr. Barnett, however, is no doubt, well satisfied with the new Crystal in all its details, from the big mercury light in front of the ticket office to the drop curtain, which it might be said incidentally, has a splendid painting of the Golden Rule Dry Goods store at the center piece, surrounded by the advertisements of Albuquerque's live wire business men.

The new Crystal is just a bit ahead of the procession and Joseph Barnett, the proprietor, would not have it otherwise. Mr. Barnett is known to everybody in Albuquerque. His faith in Albuquerque and his good judgment in business ventures in the past, are known to every prominent business man. Some ten years ago when Mr. Barnett paid $22,550 for a twenty-five foot lot adjoining Second street on Central avenue and paid an equal sum for an adjoining lot, and built on two lots the magnificent Barnett building of three stories, many people smiled at him, believing that he was a mile ahead of the procession. But the Barnett building has proved one of the best investments Mr. Barnett ever made.

And so it is with the New Crystal.

Mr. Barnett knows that it is ahead of the procession. But he has confidence in Albuquerque; in her ability to do things. He believes that the people of Albuquerque want a good popular price theater with first class vaudeville and good photoplays. He is going to give them these things. And it is almost a foregone conclusion that the people will support the theater and that the New Crystal will be a success from the start.

THE LEADING MAN IN THE "BARRIER."

REX BEACH LOST MONEY IN A BIG THEATRICAL WAR

The Barrier," Which Plays in Elks' Here Saturday Night, Was Prevented From Coming West.

The theatrical war recently waged with such bitterness between John Coon and the promoters of "The Once-Door" movement on the one hand and Harry & Kresser, heads of the Theatrical syndicate on the other, and which is to no means ended, has cost Rex Beach over twenty thousand dollars to date, as it was the direct result of keeping his latest and greatest success "The Barrier" out of the most profitable territory in the west.

How upon the heels of its eastern success and while the book was being read faster than it could be printed, a sweeping tour of the west was booked, but when war was declared between the two theatrical factions.

"The Barrier" was cancelled in company with Maude Adams, John Drew, David Warfield, and other famous and famous names.

The season of inactivity for this part of the "Lost Frontier" which managers agreed would have the people away everywhere west of the Missouri, has been a direct and terrible loss of twenty thousand dollars in royalties to Rex Beach, the author, and Eugene Presbury, the dramatist, and it took all of their influence, backed by the positive demands of the western theater-owners, to permit the lot to be lifted sufficient to allow the Barrier to make its tour.

Results up to date have justified the effort that was put forth for "The Barrier" has surpassed the high water mark of receipts in nearly every city that has been played since it started upon its western tour.

The date now set for this city is Saturday, October 7, opening the theatrical season in Albuquerque in the Elks' theater.

HAGERMAN, HANNA AND PRICHARD THE ORATORS

Men Who Have No Strength or Following in Home Precincts and Counties Wear Out Albuquerque People.

DON JESUS LINES UP DEPUTIES AGAIN

Young Man With High Ideals and Creased Trousers Condescends to Talk to the "Common Peepul" of This County

A fair-sized Democratic rally was held at the Elks' theater last night. The meeting was addressed by three leaders of the so-called "Progressive Republican League" who acted and acted as two hard-worked interpreters. The crowd in attendance, which conformed filled the lower floor of the theater, was made up of about 50 per cent lifelong Democrats, 10 per cent ladies and 10 per cent Republican voters. Of the latter class about half were deputy sheriffs, evidently charged with the duty of seeing that their chief got all that was coming to him in the way of applause. The oration was freely expressed that had all these deputies been present at the Bernalillo county jail one night last May, their combined efforts might possibly have prevented a jail delivery to which an even dozen of criminals were allowed to escape. In the crowd also were many citizens who are known to be warm supporters of the Republican ticket nominated at Las Vegas.

The political complexion of the crowd was shown by the fact that every honorary reference to the Democratic party by the speakers was greeted by applause. While the very few occasions when the leaguers remembered that they had once owned allegiance to the Republican party and mentioned the matter were passed by in significant silence. The most noticeable incident along this line came when Mr. G. W. Pritchard, the first of the leaguers to come to the microphone, said that "everything else in the constitution of New Mexico was put into effect in Santa Fe" tomorrow. He said that the platform had been agreed upon, while everything good in that instrument was the work of the Democrats and "progressives." This highly eulogistic reference to the Democrats was the signal of wild applause on the part of the large number of uninterested who were on hand.

The batting average of the League as shown last night was not very high, and there was a conspicuous lack of team work on the part of the players. Each speaker had a different grievance and a different suggestion for a remedy, and at the conclusion of the proceedings it would have been difficult for any one to have told from what had been said just where the league stood on what it represented.

The meeting was opened by Sheriff and League President Jesus Romero with the aid of Interpreter Modesto Ortiz. While Mr. Romero had nothing to say beyond the fact that the meeting would come to order, the two sheriffs present seemed to think this a matter of brilliant import, and cheered long and lustily.

The first speaker to be introduced was Col. George W. Pritchard, who is well remembered in this city by reason of the fact that some years ago he conducted a successful filibuster against the Journal-Democrat, which is now one of his team-mates in the league, but which at that time was using against him its characteristic weapons of which it is now seeking to tear down the Republican party. Mr. Pritchard seemed surprised to see so many people present, and said it was because somebody's conscience had been "touched." The speaker started out on the low key, but gradually warmed up to his subject. He seemed more or less preoccupied, and during most of the time he was speaking stared pensively at the second violin of the orchestra, as if his remarks were a casual matter between the two instruments.

At one part of his speech he seemed to drop into mystery, but forgot his lines and had several marks struck up against him in the error column. He criticized the platform adopted by the Las Vegas convention because he said it had been drawn by Hon. Thomas B. Catron, and because the ticket that had been nominated at the convention some time, while he seemed to doubt that the Lord would ever help him out in the matter of the constitution.

He informed his hearers that he had been born at Washington, along with Messrs. Jones, Hunt and Ferguson, and didn't seem to be a bit ashamed of it. He also admitted that New Mexico was not the worst community in the United States, a confession that brought a sigh of relief from his hearers. He said he had been informed that he was born a Republican, and that he expected to die a Republican, but furnished no corroborative evidence to bear out his statement.

No applause greeted this announcement. He agreed with the speakers who had preceded him that there were good men on the ticket nominated at Las Vegas, but took some time with him as to how they got on the ticket. Mr. Pritchard had stated that it was the result of an accident, while Mr. Hanna expressed the positive conviction that they had been placed there intentionally and with premeditated design.

He concluded his remarks by inviting every body present to come
